MONOTHEISM

The pursuit of truth requires courage,
Or it is the pursuit of something less.

FOUNDATIONS
MONOTHEISM

“With time, some followers of polytheistic gods became so fond of their particular patron that they drifted away from the basic polytheistic insight [of competing gods and so, competing sets of intentions (one set for each god) operating upon nature]. They began to believe that their god was the only god and that He was indeed the supreme power of the universe. Yet, at the same time, they continued to view Him as [still] possessing [the same] interests and biases [as any individual god among the many gods existing then was universally believed to possess], and [therefore] believed that they could [thereby continue to] strike deals with Him [as they always had in the past]. Thus were born [any and all the] monotheistic religions [to ever exist in the world], whose followers beseech the supreme power of the universe to help them recover from illness, win the lottery, and gain victory in war.”

—Yuval Noah Harari, in his masterpiece,
Sapiens, A Brief History of Humankind

FOREWORD

A religious nation is a world over run with the symbols of ever-present, insurmountable, inescapable, and absolutely unyielding authority, everywhere, in every corner, of every life, and from which there is never escape or reprieve, or ever the hope of any, not even within the refuge of one's own mind, where these symbols still haunt from childhood. It is a world where all liberty that serves not wealth or power is forbidden. Only backwardness and stagnation can prevail. In this way, thinking freely eventually becomes lost and long forgotten, and corruption then, established institution instead, blessed and sanctioned by both state and sacred, family tradition alike, despite all of the great sacrifice that must be endured by the family of man; as the price to be paid by so very many, for the sake of providing pleasure, to an over-privileged, ruling few. All religious states are, universally, monotheist, always. All religious states, universally fail, always. The new religious state universally thinks always that it will be the first that will not fail, again, universally, always; thereby establishing the absolute certainty that it absolutely and certainly will; it is, in every case, unstoppable.
